QUESTION 1*SOALAN 1*Government Intervention in International Trade

National Security argument is another reason why government of the land might intervene in trade. Some industries in the country are protected due to national security reasons. Industries like defense, aerospace etc. are often controlled by the government as it is believed that the government should always be self-reliant. Humanitarian reasons can also be argued as a point due to which the governments intervene. Since the establishment of Israel, The Arab has league boycotted any trade with the country. Companies that have branches, agencies or factories in Israel are put on the blacklist. This was another reason why for many years, Coca Cola was banned in the Arab states and only Pepsi was available as Coca Cola Company was known to provide aid to the Israel. (The Independent, 1993).
